The next chapter

Meet a cast of characters including fellow esports pros, international competitors, and StarCraft fans as Bolt tries to find his place within the world of esports in South Korea. Behind the backdrop of esports team houses, PC Bangs, and overseas tournaments, new interactive StarCraft sequences and Glossary/Codex features expand upon the storytelling in this installment of the esports visual novel.

Play like a pro

Don't Forget Our Esports Dream guides players through interactive StarCraft scenes that highlight actual actions players would take when competing. The game also measures APM (actions per minute) similar to StarCraft, so players can see if they can stack up against the best. The experience scales for all skill levels, no previous experience in StarCraft required.

Expanded dialog system

I have like 5 or 6 VR baseball games and I rate this #3 behind Baseball Kings and dream match baseball.

Upon booting this game my expectations were low, it's a bit rough looking at first but the gameplay is actually good. It's a sandbox baseball game with progression motivating you to do better to unlock new levels. Hitting feels satisfying maybe more than any other baseball game I have. Pitches aren't actual speed those they either lob them over the plate or you hit it off the tee.

Fielding is fun too and could almost replace All Star Fielding challenge if you could catch grounders.. I don't see this game as insensitive. It sucks to see that it offended some people, but for people like me, it kind of hits the spot. Nice to see other people have similar fantasies to my own. Maybe it's more fetish than transgender, or maybe some transgenders are super fetishy. Maybe I am one. I have no idea. Am in a bit of a state of identity crisis lately :P This has provided a nice little escape for me during a rough time and I am grateful for it.

I hate to see that it upset people when it brightened my day. Hopefully the developers will hear the feedback and start developing other characters that others can identify with. Dina, is actually my favorite. Seems to be the one that offends people the most. I see her as quirky, brilliant, courageous, but just has a little bit of tunnel vision and accidentally ignores others. We all have our flaws. I think it's meant to be light and fun.

Watch some YouTube videos or check out the demo if you are interested before buying. The $25 price seemed a bit steep, but I caved anyway after the demo hooked me. I hope others enjoy this and that those that find it offensive can see how it is just for different people.. The first tries are so insanely frustrating. But it gets better. Believe me. I bought this because it seemed really bad and a friend and I wanted to have a good laugh.

The character art is okay, but the backgrounds are just pictures with filters.

Each route takes about 10 minutes to complete. I don't honestly think this product should be sold. It should be a free game for what is offered. There are so many better VNs out there for free.

But again, if you want a good laugh, go for it.

There are parts where you can't even read the text because it skips automatically for you. There are times when the text wrapping is bad and cuts off a word. Sometimes, the little rainbow at the bottom right corner of the text box blocks a word. The translation is....bad and awkward.

. Russifier pls!! TL;DR: Great potential, rough around the edges because early access.

It's a tactical realtime strategy where you control a squad of four soldiers. Each side has multiple players in charge of a squad each. The goal of each round is either to eliminate all enemy soldiers or to capture and hold victory points long enough to achieve victory.

The game reminded me of Close Combat series. There is no base building. Each round your commanding officer makes extra equipment available to you for a bit of customization, but beyond that there is not much you can do to customize your squad. The game is fairly tactical where the winner is determined by who is better at flanking the enemy and by grenades. Seriously, the grenades have played a very decisive role in every battle I've fought so far.

There is definitely great potential here, but the game is an early access game, no doubt about that. There is a lot polish missing, there are bugs with the camera system, matches not ending when they should, crashes, etc.

As of today there are also not many concurrent users. I've been able to find a game every time I played, but there seems to be just enough people to populate one North America server at any given time. One little gripe I have is the time it takes to play again after your squad gets wiped out (and this will happen a lot when you first start). You go into spectator mode when that happens and wait until the round is resolved. Maybe if you could join another game while waiting, it would feel better but 1) there usually is not another populated game room as mentioned above, and 2) the game crashed every single time on me when trying to leave the game room.

So all in all it's good fun when you're on a good run. Patience is advised at other times.

match is played for you who have friends who like to play together. bioshock, ♥♥♥♥ uncharted, this is the best example of true uncontested writing ability in video games.. Badass DLC worthy to my collection XD

Side Note: Makes sense that Captain Marvel comes out the same day as DMCV cause Carol Danvers and Dante both defeated Omega Ultron in Marvel VS Capcom. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7YX9oKZq57A&feature=youtu.be>

Amazingly cute and well designed tower defense style game where you are trying to pump up the incoming creatures on the map rather than trying to destroy them. The reason you ask? Quite simple... The incoming creatures are farm animals like chickens, cattle, and pigs being processed for human consumption! Since you get paid by the pound, the fatter these animals are before going into the packing facility, the more money you make! Don't let them die of hunger, thirst, or alien invasion before they are packaged up and you are rewarded for their weight!

Use the money earned to buy more hormone injection guns, more corn-firing food guns, and antibiotic guns as well as upgrading them all! Also money earned helps you buy power ups, farm hands, and upgrades.

It's a comical, very cute and amazingly challenging tower defense style game that pokes fun at the sad state that is our current food industry. It's all about the money in this game, and the animal caring folk need not apply here!

I'd give it an 8V10 for both challenge, originality, and sheer number of options and features... and this game could easily get even better as the game evolves through it's early access process!. game in handphone on steam ...
