A: You can download the Cubase 5.1 from here A man who shared a joke about the dangers of pregnancy with a female audience member during the Oxford Union's debate on abortion is defending his right to free speech after he was banned from the debating society for life. Alex Bird, a history graduate, spent a year preparing to debate abortion with Dr. Patrick Strudwick, a medical student. Despite the strong pro-life sentiment in the audience, the pair agreed the topic of the debate was 'irrelevant' and debated whether the second-trimester abortion ban should be withdrawn. One audience member, who is a member of Oxford Union said she and the women in her family were pro-life but added that she found it 'astounding' that the vote in favour of abortion was so strong.
